EXPERIMENTS WITH A MONSTER GUN.-The

London News of July 27 savs: The S1 ten gun, or 80 ten gun as it should now be called after so much of the interior has been cut away is still attracting attention at Woolwich. As our readers are aware, it is only re-cently that the gun has been able to fire the 16 inch shot for which it was originally designed, for all previous experiments were made when the calibre of the weapon was much less than it is at present To fire a projectile weighing three quarters of a ton with a charge of gunpowder amounting to 300 lbs was rather too much of a risk for our artillerymen to undertake offhand seeing that the experience hitherto gained with the so-called "Woolwich Infant' had reference to charges not half as heavy. Consequently it was resolved to reach the maximum charge by easy stages, watching the pressure of the gunpowder at every discharge until it might be considered safe to employ the full battering power of the gun. This has now been done, and for the last few days the weapon has been tested to a degree actually beyond that which it was at first designed to withstand. Without subjecting the metal to any excessive strain, it has been found possible to burl a 1,700 lb shot with such terrible velocity as to render it capable of penetrating an armor plate 24 inches in thickness at 500 yards. Or, in other words, our ironclad of the future, the Inflexible, whose iron walls are to be a score of inches in thickness, would not be safe within two or three miles of such a gun. The problem that the Woolwich authorities have been so long solving in regard to the monster weapon has been to discover how to make it do its work with u straining. Every round that is fired registers the pressure exerted by the burn ing gunpowder to move the massive shot into action, and every time the latter quits the gun it leaves a record of its velocity benind. To ascortain the pressure, the gun is bored in half a dozen places to admit of the introduction of crusher gauges, short pillars of copper loosely enclosed in cylinders of steel, and the copper, becoming more or less compressed, thus indicates to within half a ton what the pressure has been inside the gun at the moment of explosion. The flight of the shot, as it comes from the muz zle, is timed, as our readers already know, by means of electricity, and hence it has been possible to obtain a clear insight into the working of this monster piece of ordna ce from first to last.
